

Dear Stephan

I would like to reference your scientific work during my upcoming presentation to an international consortium in relation to an important archeological project. The project has already gained funding and governmental approval, indeed, it is in its second phase; delayed by the pandemic.

The nature of my research uses the texts from all three Abrahamic religious texts (Christian, Islam, Judaism) to identify the location of an extremely important artifact. I am not religious myself but part of my conclusion is that all these religious Prophets recorded information which, when triangulated together, points to one location.

My theory is that the "prophets" used a form of remote viewing where they recorded what they were seeing, although there is much empirical evidence to support this rationale; this forms the bulk of my research data.

My presentation is long and covers many facets of religious history, yet I would still like to quote your research to give credibility to a recorded phenomenon that all-too-often gets branded as pseudo science.

All knowledge is science, in fact, the etymological root is the same for both.

Are you able to provide me with any of the following?

- HTML links which could help me compose my slides
- A list of your scientific papers on remote viewing
- Videos or slides which I can incorporate into my presentation

Thank you in anticipation and continued good luck in your extraordinary work!
